Though born in Arkansas, Lawrence Buford has made his home and worked his artistry in the Napa County area. After retiring, he immersed himself in the study of the human form -- drawing, painting and sculpting. He consumed texts on art history and every art course that local colleges (Solano, Napa Valley and Contra Costa Fine and Media Arts department) had to offer.

"As a retired lithographer and passionate sculptor, I interpret the figure in both its inner and outer manifestations always examining the various elucidations of the human form in art. When I approach a piece, I have been attracted by beauty, poetic notion and/or by the whisper of enduring truth. I delve into the subject's history, the recent past, the works, the appearances and try to divide the subject's impact."
